After a little research I have come across to two possible solutions: Install a apache http server. But this is a bit overkill since I only need to serve git and have a script which can only be accessed by git at this moment. Use git as a service - I haven't tried this yet. The linux server will be used for other purposes too, so the apache http server solution will be installed after git has been installed. Any suggestions on what solution to use? A: Gitosis looks a great solution for you.
