I'm also an early user of the new Edge browser based on Microsoft's Chromium code base. But in recent years, the biggest video sites in the world have actually been getting smaller, more niche and more divided. Consider YouTube, the world's leading video platform. Even as its views and global reach appeared to grow every year, revenue and ad growth was modest for the last five years, and now declines are more pronounced. Looking at the two countries that each combined have more than 100 million users, YouTube's global reach has shrunk to just over half. And in the U.S., where the company once dominated the category, it's lost nearly half of the active audience. The decline of YouTube's global audience shrinks the reach of ads by one-third. The same goes for Amazon's in-house video platform, Twitch. Since Amazon bought the service in 2014, Twitch's reach in the U.S. has shrunk by nearly 50 percent. And just recently, Twitch introduced a premium tier for fans that gives them access to exclusive content.
