Function Peptidyl arginine deiminases are a family of calcium dependent enzymes that catalyze the post-translational conversion of the amino acid arginine to citrulline in proteins. There are at least two isoforms of the enzyme. The cytosolic isoform (PAD4) has been implicated in the pathogenesis of rheumatoid arthritis, systemic lupus erythematosus, multiple sclerosis, ischemia/reperfusion injury, and stroke. A specific and potent inhibitor of PAD4 is Cl-amidine, which causes growth arrest in the G1 phase and apoptosis in some cancer cell types. Clinical significance PAD4 has been implicated in inflammatory diseases, such as chronic inflammatory demyelinating polyneuropathy and stroke. Antibody targeting of PAD4 has been shown to reduce inflammation in immune mediated diseases such as rheumatoid arthritis and ulcerative colitis. References Further reading This invention relates generally to surgical treatments for spinal stenosis, and more specifically, to dynamic stabilization devices and methods for surgical treatments of spinal stenosis. Spinal stenosis is a progressive narrowing of the spinal canal that causes compression of the spinal cord, nerve roots and nerve fibers
